This one day hands-on practical course is designed for surgical trainees wishing to further develop their anastomosis techniques. The day concentrates on vascular and bowel anastomosis techniques.

Surgical Anastomosis Techniques is designed to improve surgical skills through specialist demonstration and teaching. The course is suitable for surgeons in general training or for those who are embarking on specialty training.

Animal tissue models allow intensive practice in refining instrument handling techniques, suturing, stapling and the use of vascular prosthetic material. The most common examples of bowel and vascular anastomoses have been chosen to provide rapid increase in skill levels.

The bowel techniques will be:

- Sutured end-to-end interrupted seromuscular submucosal
- Circular stapled end-to-end
- Linear stapled side-to-side

The vascular anastomotic techniques will be:

- Preparing an artery for anastomosis
- Fashioning synthetic vascular material
- End to side
- End to end
